

ENVIRONMENTALLY-INDUCED DISPLACEMENT AND RELIGION IN LATIN AMERICA AND THE CARIBBEAN: Engaging the Normative and Legal Landscape

Co-sponsored by American University's Center for Latin American & Latino Studies (CLALS), the South American Network for Environmental Migrations (RESAMA), Paraíba State University's Research Centre on Environmentally Displaced Persons (NEPDA), and the University of Brasília's Institute of International Relations (IREL), with support from the Henry Luce Foundation

Brasília, Brazil, January 23-24, 2020

WORKSHOP AGENDA

Day 1: Thursday, January 23rd

8:30am-9:00am Arrival and Registration

Please note: A shuttle will transport workshop participants from the Hotel Cullinan to our meeting venue. Our workshop will be held at the Instituto de Relações Internacionais (sala multiuso) on the Darcy Ribeiro Campus of the Universidade de Brasília.

9:00am-10:30am Session 1: Welcomes, Introductions and Framing Discussion

Description: Brief background of how we got here, including

Moderator: Jayesh Rathod (American University)

Panelists:

Elizabeth Keyes (University of Baltimore)

Andrea Pacheco Pacifico (Paraíba State University)

Carolina Claro (University of Brasília)

3:45pm-4:30pm Transport to public event

4:30pm-6:30pm Public Forum: The Crisis of Environmental Refugees: Addressing Knowledge Gaps to Meet Governance Challenges

Event location: Auditório Joaquim Nabuco, Faculdade de Direito, Darcy Ribeiro Campus, Universidade de Brasília

6:30pm-7:00pm Transport to dinner

7:00pm-9:00pm Dinner

Please note: We have made reservations at the Restaurante Coco Bambu (Iago sul unit): <https://cocobambu.com/>, and have arranged for transport from the meeting space to the restaurant.

ENVIRONMENTALLY-INDUCED DISPLACEMENT AND RELIGION IN LATIN AMERICA AND THE CARIBBEAN:
Engaging the Normative and Legal Landscape

Co-

and the Environment.” He has edited the volume, Migraciones, ambiente y cambio climático: Estudios de caso en América del Sur (International Organization for Migration, 2017) and published two books, Los hijos del retorno. Una nueva comunidad inmigratoria (Editorial Prometeo Libros, 2008) and Por qué se van (2004). Email: raruja@yahoo.com

Evan Berry is Assistant Professor in Environmental Humanities in the School of History, Philosophy, and Religious Studies at Arizona State University. He received his PhD in Religious Studies from the University of California, Santa Barbara. His research examines the intersections among religion, globalization, and climate change, and seeks to advance knowledge about the role of religious actors in contemporary environmental contestations. His book Devoted to Nature: The Religious Roots of American Environmentalism (University of California Press, 2015) explores the religious sources of the environmental imagination in the United States. He is also co-editor of Church, Cosmology and the Environment: Religion and Social Conflict in Contemporary Latin America (Routledge, 2018). Dr. Berry’s current work combines ethnographic research with philosophical reflection to address the study of religious civil society groups actively engaged with the challenge of climate change. He previously served as PI on CLALS’s project, "Religion and Climate Change in Cross-Regional Perspective." Email: evan.berry@asu.edu

Fernanda de Salles Cavedon-Capdeville

right of return, among other topics. She is both author and editor of multiple books and articles on these topics, including two 2015 volumes: ¿Escapando de la crisis? Un análisis comparativo de trayectorias laborales de migrantes argentines en dos contextos de recepción: Ciudad de México y Madrid and El retorno en el nuevo escenario de la migración entre México y los Estados Unidos. Email: lgandini@unam.mx Rueanna Haynes is Senior Legal Advisor and Support Team Lead for the Alliance of Small Island States (AOSIS) at Climate Analytics. She received a Master in International Legal Studies from Georgetown University Law Centre as well as a Master in International Environmental Policy from Sciences Po.

her LLM in international law from the University of Lancaster (UK). Her research interests include: international human rights law, refugees and migrants, asylum, trafficking and forced migration, with a focus on Latin America and Brazil, as well as the international regime for environmental displacement. She is also author of Racial Discrimination in Alagoas: The Brazilian Bar Association in Alagoas. (EDUFAL, 2011). Dr. Pacifico has previously been a visiting research fellow at Oxford University and York University and has served as a board member of the Brazilian Red Cross of Alagoas since 2017. Email: apacifico@hotmail.com

Erika Pires Ramos is Founder of the South American Network for Environmental Migrations (RESAMA) and Federal Attorney at the Brazilian Institute for the Environment and Natural Renewable Resources (IBAMA). She received her PhD in International Law from University of São Paulo, and her research specializes in climate change, disasters, human rights and environmental migration governance. Dr. Pires Ramos also serves as Researcher for the Study and Research Centre on Environmentally Displaced Persons (NEPDA), as well as the Human Rights and Vulnerabilities Research Group UNISANTOS. Email: erikaprs@gmail.com

Michele R. Pistone is Professor of Law and Director of the Clinic for Asylum, Refugee and Emigrant Services (CARES) at Villanova University's Charles Widger School of Law. She received her JD from St. John's University School of Law and an LLM from Georgetown University Law Center. Her research focuses on technological innovations in the practice of law, and in legal education, asylum and refugee law, immigration law, migration, and Catholicism. Among other projects, she is currently working on the relationship between asylum and refugee protection, justice, statelessness, and Christian social thought. She is also co-author of Stepping Out of the Brain Drain: Applying Catholic Social Teaching in a New Era of Migration (Lexington, 2007). Email: pistone@law.villanova.edu

Jayesh Rathod is Associate Dean for Experiential Education, Professor of Law, and Director of the Immigrant Justice Clinic at American University Washington College of Law. He received his JD from Columbia University School of Law. His body of scholarship includes empirical, applied and theoretical work, and covers topics relating to immigration law, labor and employment law, and legal pedagogy. Professor Rathod's research has appeared in a variety of prominent journals, including the Arizona Law Review, Houston Law Review, Michigan Journal of Law Reform, and U.C. Irvine Law Review. In 2018, he also received the Pauline Ruyle Moore Award for outstanding scholarship in the area of public law. Professor Rathod continues to work on a range of cases and projects relating to immigration detention, removal defense (including criminal-